This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

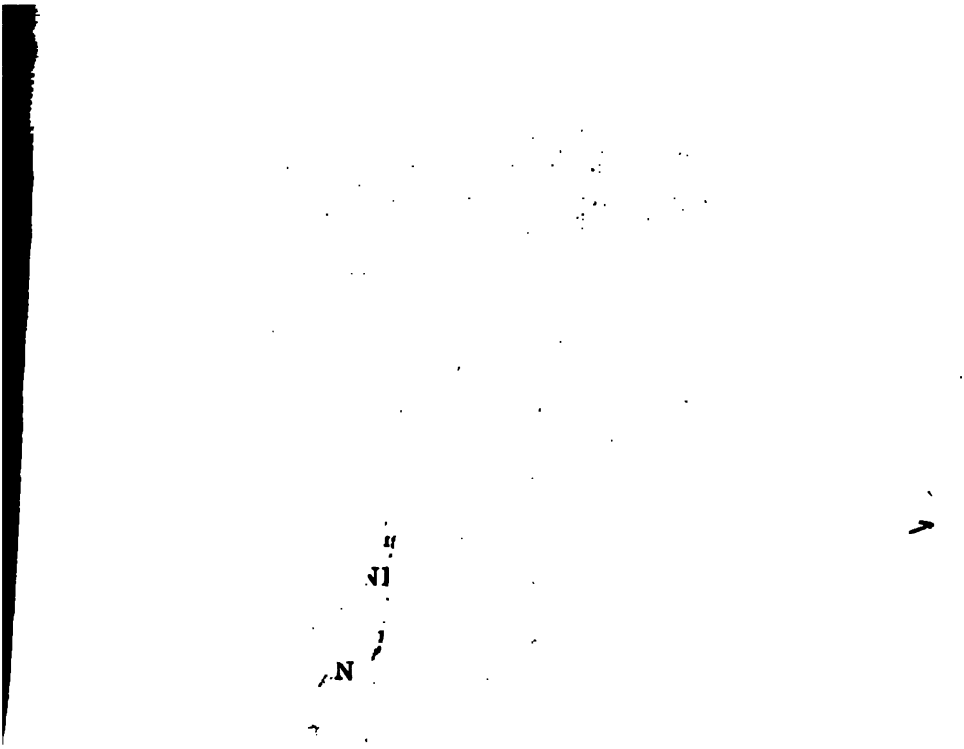
WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA



NOTICE

THIS work is thoroughly revised, brought down, and reissued biennially. It aims to give a brief, crisp personal sketch of every living man and woman in the United States whose position or achievements make his or her personality of general interest, and tells just the things every intelligent person wants to know about those who are most conspicuous in every walk of life.

A valuable feature of the book will be found in the appended addresses. No other work has ever attempted the laborious task of finding and furnishing the addresses of leading Americans in all parts of the world. Thus, the book possesses not only the best attributes of a Biographical Dictionary, but is also a handy Directory of those living people of the United States in whom almost everybody is interested.

THE FIRST EDITION was published in 1899, and contained 827 pages, comprising 8,602 names. The edition was long ago exhausted and copies can no longer be furnished.

THE SECOND EDITION, Revised and enlarged, containing 1,300 pages and 11,551 names, was issued in 1901. Copies of the edition will be supplied until the stock is exhausted (only a limited number of copies now remain unsold) at the original price of $2.75 per copy.

THE THIRD AND PRESENT EDITION, (1903-5), contains about 4,000 new names (making a total of 14,443 names), and the number of pages has been increased to over 1,800, while the thorough revision through which the work has passed, has greatly enhanced the usefulness and value of the book.

The price of this edition (1903-5) was placed at $3.25 per copy to all who sent their orders to the publishers in advance of publication. With publication of the book the price is raised to $3.50 per copy, net. It may be had from leading booksellers, or will be sent, postpaid, to any address upon receipt of

PREFACE

In the volume now presented to the reader, WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA may be regarded as having attained mature growth. The original volume of 1899-1900 was experimental, and the new and revised edition of 1901-1902 fully confirmed the hopes which the success of the first had raised, that the publication would become a permanency in the list of indispensable books of reference.

The cordial reception accorded to the work, as first published, was intensified in the welcome given to the second, and much enlarged, edition. Several new features were added, which met general approval, and the larger scope of the book made its value more widely felt.

WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, being a record of the living and the active, is a publication which to a peculiar degree needs frequent revisions. Each edition supersedes and superannuates its predecessor for all up-to-date use. Since the first edition appeared in 1899 there have been added 7,691 new names and 1,850 names have been dropped (including 1,108 persons who have died). The increase in the total number of names is nearly 70 per cent, and more than half of the 14,443 names now in the book were not in the first edition of four years ago. Even as regards the names common to both books, there are very few indeed of the sketches which are not materially changed or greatly extended.

As compared with the second edition (1901-1902), the present volume, with about 4,000 new names (27.63 per cent of the whole), together with revision and extension of 53 per cent of the personal sketches brought over from the former editions, and the additional change of 832 addresses, becomes indispensable to those accustomed to resort to WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA for current information about notable living Americans.

Yet, while their value for up-to-date reference in regard to the living is entirely supplanted by the new edition, the old volumes gain, year by year, in historical and reminiscent usefulness. The current volume presents the living with such increased completeness as to be indispensable for daily reference, yet the old editions become more and more valuable as records of those who have died, many of which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to find elsewhere. This fact is meeting with wide recognition, so that not only public and institutional libraries, but private libraries also, are keeping the old volumes as a series of the utmost value for presenting, with a completeness nowhere else attainable, the biographical history of the United States and all its varied interests and activities, for the periods covered by these volumes.

The first edition (1899-1900) contained 8,602 names; the second edition (1901-1902), 11,551 names, and the present edition comprises 14,443 names. Out of the 11,551 names in the book of 1901-1902, there have been dropped 1,098, of which 585 represent those (not in the present edition) of the 620 who have died. The remaining 513 have been omitted for various reasons—some because they no longer belong in the arbitrary classification which secured their admission; some because their present addresses could not, after the most persistent effort, be ascertained, and a few because their inclusion has been found to have been originally inappropriate, or is no longer deemed desirable. There are 3,990 new names in the present edition. The actual increase in the number of biographical sketches from the last edition is 2,892, or 25.03 per cent. The number of biographical pages has increased from 1,278 in the 1901-1902 edition, to 1,699 in the present edition, or 30.55 per cent. There were 822 biographical pages in the original edition of 1899-1900, so that the present edition contains more than twice the number of pages embraced in the original book. Notwithstanding the largely increased number of pages, the physical proportions of the present volume are no greater than those of the 1901-1902 edition. It was realized that the book of 1901-1902 had about reached the limit of bulk consistent with retaining it as a handy volume, suitable for ready reference, and for that reason great care has been taken, by closer editorial condensation and by the necessary mechanical adjustments, to keep WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA within easily handled limitations, its uses being such that only a volume of convenient bulk can properly meet them. It will, therefore, continue to be the policy to permanently retain the handy-volume character of the work.

The present volume is practically a new book, carefully revised and edited to bring the information down to date. Of the 10,453 personal sketches brought over from the last edition 6,103 have been materially revised, and the whole book has been reset and recast. Of the addresses in the last edition 832 have been changed.

A criticism passed upon the last edition was that it was somewhat partial to the educational, scientific and professional people, and needed to pay more attention to the capitalists, manufacturers and men of business. There was some basis for the criticism, but the fault, if it be a fault, was rather with the "captains of industry" themselves than with WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. Of all the many classes from whom the data for WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA are drawn, the most difficult people to reach are those engaged in large business and financial enterprises. Many of these ignored, and a few refused, the requests for information until after the first two editions had been printed. For the present edition many who had hitherto declined readily yielded to the request for adequate information. One gentleman explained his tardiness by the fact that many business men are suspicious of biographical publications, because they are constantly besieged by propositions to print biographies for a consideration. "I have your book," he continued, "and I find it very useful. I gladly return your blank filled out, and I am sorry I did not answer you two years ago; but the fact is, I thought you wanted to pull my leg." Probably this explains the earlier reticence of many who, having since found that WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA has no designs on their crural extremities, are willing to be aligned with the goodly array.

Be that as it may, the new names, in the book now presented, will be found to include an especially large number of those who represent the great industries and financial enterprises of the country; the organizers of gigantic operations which have focused the world's attention upon our men of bold initiative and of surpassing skill in combination. But while giving men of this class a wide representation, those in other pursuits have not been neglected. The new edition is not only much more comprehensive, but also, it is believed, more accurately balanced and in every way better than its predecessors, approaching closer to a complete selection of those most notable in all departments of usefulness and reputable adventure. Absolute perfection cannot, of course, be claimed. It is likely that an occasional name will be sought and not found, but the present volume goes to press with only a few omissions of those regarded as belonging to the first rank of importance. These few have so far remained obdurate to the blandishments and respectful insistence with which WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA is wont to secure its pabulum of biographical facts.

There still remain some inequalities. Some very eminent people are parsimonious of detail when it comes to the enumeration of personal statistics. Others, while answering all the questions of the printed blank, omit reference to what are often the most important incidents of their lives—a class of facts which no general set of questions could be made to explicitly suggest. The governor of one of the original states filled the data sheet without once suggesting that he was governor or had ever done anything in politics. Such inadequate returns add largely to the labor of compilation by imposing the task of securing such information from extraneous sources. As a general thing, it is far preferable to have a surplus of information than a deficit, although excessive generosity in this respect sometimes leads to an "embarrassment of riches." One gentleman of distinguished ante-bellum record "took his pen in hand," and wrote an installment of autobiography which brought him to the Mexican War in about eight thousand words, at the end of which he cheered the recipient with the assurance that the remainder would reach him in due time. It did: in about a dozen similar installments which arrived, with great regularity, in every Monday's morning mail until the story was told.

That was an extreme case. Another was that of a lady, a one-book author and magazine contributor, who, in place of the requested data, sent a four-column write-up from a local paper. The few biographical facts extracted from this document as appropriate for WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA were, in due course, sent to the lady for correction and approval. She crossed out the brief sketch and wrote below it: "I do not see why you sent me this little paragraph. Use the printed article I sent you a month ago. It is ever so much longer and a great deal more interesting."

Proud mothers and fond fathers continue to enumerate their children. One of the fathers, listing ten, adds: "Put that in. I'm with the President on this race-suicide question." Many others list their forbears back to the Mayflower and the "F. F. V.'s"; and it is astonishing what a large number have family trees running back to the Crusades, or even to the Vikings.

On the other hand, it has been very difficult to procure the uniformity, so much to be desired, in regard to the common facts of life, such as date and place of birth, parentage, education, marital status, etc. It is a remarkable truth, which psychologists may be able to explain, that a large number of people disdain to answer by rule, and seem to be actuated by the same perverse spirit that made a certain Texas judge always write the long way across ruled foolscap paper, because he declined to "let any long-nosed Yankee manufacturer dictate to him where he should write."

These instances and tendencies are mentioned to explain occasional deficiencies in the individual sketches. The item of date of birth is one at which many, of both sexes, shy. "Racks and thumbscrews could not extort it," wrote a lady, while one man, in a burst of confidence explains: "I am not married yet, and the lady would not like to see the date in print."

Many omit details with no special reason and will furnish them if proper suggestion is made. For the benefit of these the expedient was used of preparing a suggestive formula. But it does not always attain its object. To one judge, who had merely furnished the dates of his admission to the bar and of his appointment to the bench, there was sent a form like this (the name being changed here for obvious reasons):

"Smith, John, jurist; born at.....on.....18....; son of.....and.....Smith; educated at.....; married at.....on the.....day of....., 18....., to Miss..... Admitted to bar of the State of.....1876; Judge of U. S. Court for the.....District since 1897," etc

This formula received the judicial endorsement: "Quite correct. Thanks." The joke was on the editor; but the jurist, relenting, sent the desired particulars, without further solicitation, a few days later.

These incidents are given for the benefit of those to whom requests for data are sent from time to time. If all would furnish the requisite details it would greatly lighten the labor of editing and compiling, and make the book much more valuable, not only for reference, but also for such statistical and sociological discussions as will be found on the pages following these prefatory remarks.

The past two years have brought numerous mutations affecting the names in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. Death has removed many illustrious names that appeared in the 1901-1902 volume, including President McKinley, whose tragic death occurred a few weeks after the edition appeared. Many other notable names of those who were sketched in that edition are included in the Necrology on page xxxiv. The senior Admiral Selfridge, born in 1804, is among the illustrious dead of the biennium. He was the patriarch of the last edition of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, to which position Charles Haynes Haswell, born in 1809, now succeeds.

As before mentioned, 620 of the 11,551 people who had personal sketches in the 1901-1902 edition have died. This is 5.37 per cent for the biennium, or at the rate of nearly 27 per 1,000 per annum—not an alarming proportion when it is remembered that the average age of the subjects of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA is over 50 years.

The appreciative kindness of the press and the public toward this publication has continued, and many are the words of approval and encouragement which come from valued correspondents. A notable literary woman, writing en tour, notes that she found copies of the last edition at the hotels in London, Paris, Geneva and Rome, "and all were well thumbed"; and similar statements of its use and value come from resident Americans in many foreign lands, as well as from all sections of our own country.

The large use of facts and statistics, deduced from the volume by psychologists and sociologists, is very significant. The president of the American Society of Naturalists (Dr. Cattell) made use of it in his address at the Society's annual dinner on New Year's Day, 1903, and many educators and scientists have found it useful for written and spoken reference. A lecturer, using the book as a basis of information, has prepared and delivered a lecture entitled "Who's Who" all over the country. Prof. Edwin Grant Dexter, of the University of Illinois, and Professor Edward Lee Thorndike, of Columbia University, made the book the text for valuable sociological papers, and many others have, in like manner, found it helpful.

The standards of admission to the pages of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA have been carefully maintained. More names presented for approval for this volume have been declined or postponed than has been the case with either of the previous issues.

A newly introduced feature, which has the advance approval of many whose counsel is valued, is the addition of club memberships. The club has become so important a feature of American life that the list of clubs to which a man or woman belongs is a significant item in expression of individual tastes and environments.

The item of authorship has received special and painstaking attention. The use of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA as a library tool is so widely extended that the most eminent librarians find the book an indispensable of library equipment. The "Key to Publishers," by means of which the publisher of any book named may be found (when the requisite data has been furnished) is retained and greatly extended. The form of bibliographical statement adopted, though necessarily condensed, is believed to be as full and complete as is possible or desirable in a book intended for popular use. It has been necessary to confine specific bibliographical mention almost exclusively to books, and to omit lists of titles of brief monographs, magazine contributions and professional papers, the systematic enumeration of which would, in many cases, double or quadruple the space occupied.

The statistical and sociological discussions, which have been a widely appreciated feature in the former issues of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, have been continued in the present edition. The educational statistics, greatly extended, and statistics of "birth and residence," will be found in this as in the former editions. To these have been added a summary having to do with the dates of birth and present ages of the 14,443 biographical subjects of this volume, and another which discusses their marital status. In connection with these articles are statistical tables, intended, as near as is possible, to furnish concrete and mathematical data for such deductions and conclusions as follow from the facts presented. Each of these tables required a separate, careful and critical examination of the entire number of personal sketches in the volume, and involved an enormous amount of labor and no inconsiderable expense. Even after all the enumerations had been made, their computation and comparison entailed much work; but all of this expenditure of effort will be fully compensated if these preliminary discussions should be found useful in the elucidation of questions of current importance.

The enlargement of the space devoted to these statistical presentations is by no means intended to discourage research by others. Examination of the book in a critical manner will suggest to those interested in sociological problems many ways in which the information it contains may be used to solve them or illustrate their discussion. The claim made for WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA from the first is more strongly supported by the present volume than by either of its predecessors: "It contains more information about notable living Americans than is found in all other books put together; and more than half the information it furnishes is readily procurable from no other source."

The list of those arbitrarily included remains practically unchanged. All members of the Fifty-Eighth Congress; all governors of States, Territories and island possessions now in office; all United States judges; all judges of State and Territorial courts of highest appellate jurisdiction; members of the Cabinet and department heads; members of the National Academy of Sciences; all general officers of the army and navy; educational heads of all larger universities and colleges, members of the National Academy of Design, heads of all the greater national societies devoted to educational and scientific purposes, and other arbitrary classifications are included in the present volume. In addition to these, the selection is necessarily a matter of judgment for which no undeviating rule is possible, but must be decided upon the merits of each individual case.

The volume now offered is confidently presented as a marked improvement over its predecessors. Added experience, careful attention to suggestions, which come from numerous sources, a constant effort to strengthen weak points wherever found, and expansion in the range of inquiry, make this edition cover the field far more completely than ever before. The volume, through its biographic mention of 14,443 notable Americans, is in marked degree representative of the material welfare, the intellectual life, the scientific research, the literary activity, the administrative, judicial, naval and military resources, and the religious, political, educational and ethical efforts and ideals of the United States.

While it is believed the present book is a decided advance in completeness over any of the preceding volumes, suggestions for improvement are invited and will be highly appreciated. The counsels and cautions of critical friends have been extremely valuable to WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA in the past, and will doubtless continue to aid in its future advancement.

EDUCATIONAL STATISTICS

In the biennial editions of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, the discussion of the educational statistics disclosed by the successive volumes has been a feature which has elicited widespread interest and comment. Many of the educational and scientific journals not only of this country, but of Europe as well, have discussed the figures presented in these summaries as illumining the value of the higher education as a preliminary to the successful career, and the newspaper press also took an active interest in the discussion.

After the presentation of the statistics in the edition of 1899-1900, there was so large a demand for a republication of like statistics in the edition of 1901-2 that it could not be overlooked. The republication of the figures was followed by a renewed interest in the question, and since the present volume has been in active preparation there have been numerous requests, some of them expressed in very urgent terms, that a new compilation be made.

The compilation now presented has taken a more extended scope, while following the same lines of inquiry, than the summaries given in the two former editions. In order to present the entire discussion in the most concrete and tangible form possible, there have been some changes in the arrangement of the figures. A closer tabulation has been made, and, in addition to the numbers in each class, there have been added percentages (computed to the nearest one-hundredth of 1 per cent) in order to show the proportions borne by the total number in each class to the entire number furnishing data in regard to their general education. A new feature in the compilation is the presentation of separate educational statistics for men and women as well as the totals. Besides the figures based upon the names in the present edition there have been added, in separate columns, the figures given in the two former editions, together with percentages to make them conform to the present tabular arrangement.

Of the total of 14,443 people (13,204 men and 1,239 women) whose brief biographies appear in the present edition, 12,325 (11,381 men and 844 women) have given more or less complete data concerning their general or profession education. The figures under each head have been obtained by careful examination of the data furnished by each individual in regard to education. It has not been possible to extend the inquiry to post-graduate work, because so many of the post-graduate degrees are honorary that their value for statistical purposes can not be gauged with even approximate accuracy. Therefore, for the purposes of the following table, the baccalaureate degree is regarded as the maximum of education, and each collegiate institution, large and small, is taken as representing a general average of collegiate education. In the items relating to general education there have been no duplications, so that where the subject has attended one or more colleges besides academies, public schools, etc., there has been only one entry, and the higher includes the lower. Of the names under the head of technical education 2,777 are duplicates of those giving information as to general education and the remainder give information as to their professional education only.

The item, "educated abroad," is much smaller in this than in former editions, because it has now been limited to include those statements about foreign education which do not give a definite idea of the grade of education received. Graduates of foreign colleges, universities, gymnasia and other institutions of recognized rank have been classified with those of like educational rank from American institutions. Those "educated abroad" in the tables have not been counted in the totals and percentages.

The table of figures and percentages follows:

The feature that will strike the reader most forcibly upon comparison of the percentages for the three different editions is the practical identity of the results tabulated. This is the more remarkable when it is understood that the compilations of the three tables were independently made, and that the second edition contained 3,701 names not in the first edition, while the present edition contains 3,990 names not in either of the others.

With reference to the 2,118 who have furnished no educational data, the absence of details does not indicate lack of education. In fact, many are in positions where a high class education is imperative. It is a misfortune, so far as the preparation of these statistical tables is concerned, that all do not respond to the categorical inquiries on the subject of education and other facts, but there are many men (and more women) who can not be induced to answer by rule. There are 847 who have given details of their professional, but not a word about their general, education. There are also a certain number of names followed only by a few identifying words, because no further information could be obtained. Judging from all the facts obtainable it is safe to say that if full information in regard to the education of all the 14,443 people in the book could be obtained, the proportions and percentages would be little changed.

The tables segregating the statistics as to the sexes, now first presented, suggest some valuable thoughts. It has been shown in another statistical table of this book that the average age of the women is 50.57 years and of the men 53.38 years. This brings a large number of the women back to the days when women's and coeducational colleges were much less numerous than now. Therefore, while 58.36 per cent of the men are college graduates only 23.76 per cent of the women are alumnæ of universities and colleges, and while 69.76 per cent of the whole number of both sexes have attended college for complete or partial courses, the proportions are 73.41 per cent for the men and 32.25 per cent for the women. The college graduates of the female sex are found principally among the younger women. In the list of those educated in secondary schools, however, the proportions of women are much larger than those of the men, being 30.42 per cent for the former and only 10.98 per cent for the latter.

In at least one case the educational statistics have been construed as a disparagement of the public schools, notwithstanding the explicit statement to the contrary. To forestall any similar misconstruction in regard to the expanded statistics of the foregoing table, it may be well to reiterate the statement that a very large majority of those attaining the highest grades of scholarship are products, originally, of the public and high schools which are enlightened civilization opens to American youth of both sexes, preparing them to "go higher" in education, and to engage successfully in the various activities of life.

STATISTICS OF AGE

Various suggestions from current discussions have led to the belief that an analysis of the data showing the ages of the various people biographically mentioned in the present volume of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA might be interesting and profitable. This would more surely be the case if all could have been induced to give the "date of birth" information; but out of the 14,443 persons mentioned (13,204 men and 1,239 women) a total of 681 persons (316 men and 365 women) give no information about the date of birth, while 12,888 men and 874 women do give such information. Of the whole number 95.28 per cent give and 4.72 per cent do not give information as to their ages. In the latter class are a certain number (mostly men) whose names appear with only a few identifying words, about specific personal details. Reticence on this subject is largely a feminine characteristic, for while 2.35 per cent of the men do not give the date of birth, proportion of women who do not is 29.46 per cent.

following table shows the number of those born in each year from age (1903) of the 874 women furnishing dates of birth is 50.57 the 12,888 men, 53.38 years. The aggregate of the combined ages 44,199 years, total 732,183 years, for the 13,762 years, and the average age is 53.27 years.

ing the dates, and it is often said that this is the era of the young man, and such instances Charles M. Schwab, who was president of the Carnegie Steel Company at 35 and of the United States Steel Corporation at 39; as George B. Cortelyou, a member of the Cabinet at 40, and numerous others are presented to prove the It is true that there are instances now of young men who have attained great prominence in various professions and vocations; but that is not a new thing. Alexander conquered the civilized world before he was 30, and Napoleon subdued Italy when he was 26 years old. Pitt was prime minister of England at 24; Alexander Hamilton became Secretary of the Treasury at 32. In proof or disproof of the claim that the chances of young people, men and women, for success in the varied fields of distinction from which the names in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA are drawn, are better or worse than formerly, the following statement of ages by decades is offered:

Ages	Men	Women

Of the 13,762 furnishing data as to age only 1.32 per cent are under 30. There are 15.21 per cent under 40, and 41.62 per cent are under and 58.38 per cent are over 50. Dividing the sexes, 4.12 per cent of the women and 1.13 per cent of the men are under 30; 23.68 per cent of the women and 14.63 per cent of the men are under 40; and 51.14 per cent of the women and 40.98 per cent of the men are under 50.

There are several considerations which affect the deductions to be drawn from these tables. The first of these is, of course, the quality of the names from which they are compiled. These 14,443 names are not paraded as superior to the other ninety millions or so of people inhabiting the United States and its insular possessions, but have been selected because they commend themselves to the judgment and experience directing that department of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA as those of men and women who, because of their position, their achievements and their relations to certain activities, are legitimate subjects of inquiry and interest.

Many sociological investigators have used WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA as a basis for statistical discussion of various kinds, and for the purpose of this investigation let us admit that the list is a worthy one. The next consideration is the incompleteness of the returns. As to the men, the number failing to furnish a birthdate is only 2.35 per cent, of whom only a few are men who acknowledge a positive aversion to stating the date. In two or three cases, however, men have frankly stated that the publication of their ages would lead to their displacement in favor of younger men. These instances are so exceptional that the figures and percentages of the 12,888 men reporting may be accepted as a close approximation to the facts as they relate to the entire number of 13,204 men in the volume.

With regard to the women, however, the case is different. The lack of information in regard to 30.19 per cent is a serious disturbance of the factors requisite for close accuracy. It may, however, be accepted as a general principle that few of the very youngest women are included in the list of those who decline data on this point, and it is likely that if they were more communicative the average ages would change but little. The reasons for women's objection to declaring their ages are numerous, doubtless, but the common opinion that it is principally spinsters who make the objection is not borne out by an examination of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA. Married women are as reluctant to disclose their ages as are the "bachelor maids."

Examination of the tables will show that more of the men were born in 1856 than in any other year, and that over one-half of the entire number were born between 1840 and 1860. Of the women more were born in 1860 than in any other year, and more than half were born between 1840 and 1865.

It would not be possible to enter here upon the various speculations and deductions which these tables suggest or illustrate. The fact that the great majority of the people having biographical mention in the volume are persons of mature age does not prove that they were not people of prominence when they were much younger. In fact, there are many instances to the contrary. Some of them appear in the book because of a distinguished record on one or the other side of the Civil War of the 'sixties. Some others have retired from great activities of various kinds in which they were leaders several decades ago. On the other hand there are many veterans of finance, literature, science, art, administration, and other great interests who have not yet retired to private life or permitted themselves to be shelved in behalf of younger men. The day of the young man (that is, of the right young man) is here, but the day of the mature man, even of the old man, has not passed, if we may judge from the records made by WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA and summarized in the tables given above.

STATISTICS OF MARRIAGE

Among the much discussed questions having an important bearing on sociological problems are several relating to marriage. It has been contended that marriage hinders or helps a career, that early marriages are no longer usual among the successful members of society, and that a large proportion of both men and women who come under that category do not marry at all. The tendencies in regard to marriage on the part of people representative of success and intelligence are unquestionably a matter of interest from many points of view.

For this reason there has been compiled, from the various biographical statements in the present edition of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, a summary of the statements made as to marriage, and covering the following points: Whole number represented: men 13,204, women 1,239; total, 14,443. Furnishing no data as to marital status: men 3,249, women 134; total, 3,385. Furnishing statements as to marriage (men 9,953, women 1,105; married 9,833, unmarried 1,225); total, 11,058.

With reference to the number furnishing no data it may be stated that in the first edition of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA the information blanks sent out did not contain any inquiry as to marriage. In the second edition that item was added, but a large number have never revised the original biographical statement as to the question of marriage. There is no reason to believe that if all furnished the information the relative proportions of married and unmarried would be materially changed.

Of the 1,225 disclosed as unmarried 815 are men and 410 are women; and of the 9,833 stated to be married 9,138 are men and 695 are women. Otherwise stated, 88.92 per cent of the entire number of both sexes are married and 11.08 per cent unmarried. Of the women 62.90 per cent are, or have been, married and 37.10 per cent are unmarried. Of the men 91.81 per cent are in the married class and 8.19 per cent are in the unmarried class. In the list of 815 unmarried men, however, are included 159 Roman Catholic prelates and priests who by their religious profession have eliminated themselves from the lists of the marriageable. In the further tables these have been omitted from consideration in the figures intended to illustrate the matrimonial tendencies and probabilities of the people under discussion. Omitting the Roman Catholic clergy the total number of men under consideration is 9,794, of whom 9,138, or 93.30 per cent, are married, and 656, or 6.70 per cent, are unmarried.

From these figures it will be seen that, among the people belonging to the various classifications admitted to WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, only about one out of thirty are bachelors, but that about one out of three of the women are spinsters.

Of the total of 9,833 married people 568, or 5.78 per cent, have been married more than once, including 33, or 4.75 per cent, of the 695 married women, and 535, or 5.85 per cent, of the married men. Of the 568, there are 504 men and 29 women who have married twice, 29 men and 4 women who have married three times and two men who have married four times.

Pursuing the subject further it has been deemed to be worth while to tabulate (1) the present ages of the unmarried, and (2) the age at marriage of those who have been married, this age relating to the first marriage only, where the person has been married more than once.

The age of the unmarried has been computed from the date of birth, but of those listed as unmarried 12 men and 130 women have failed to furnish dates from which to make the calculation. This leaves, for this table, 644 men and 280 women, of ages distributed as follows:

AGE OF THE UNMARRIED.

Age	Men	Women	Age	Men	Women	Age	Men	Women	Age	Men	Women
22	.....	2	38	22	8	54	10	9	70	4	2

36	28	9	52	14	4	68	1	1
37	22	6	53	12	6	69	5	2	Total	644	280

Of these 924 unmarried people the aggregate ages are 41,032 years and the average age is 44.41 years. Of the 280 unmarried women the aggregate age is 12,881 years and the average age is 46 years. Of the 644 unmarried men the aggregate age is 28,151 years and the average age is 43.73 years. More than half of the unmarried people of either sex are over 40.

The second table, giving the ages at first marriage, has been prepared in order to furnish light on the question whether people of success or prominence (such as are listed in WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA) marry early or late in life. From the total of 9,833 married people it is necessary to eliminate, for the purpose of this table, 1,038 people (775 men and 263 women) who give no dates from which their age at marriage can be computed. There remain, therefore, for this summary, only 8,795 people (8,363 men and 432 women). It should be remembered that this table includes widows and widowers, its object being to make the table inclusive of all who have married:

AGES AT MARRIAGE.

29	602	12	43	38	1	57	3	1	Total	8363	432

Adding together the ages at marriage of the 432 married women we have 10,788, the average age at marriage being 25 for the women. Adding together the ages at marriage of the 8,863 men gives 240,094 years, making the average age of marriage for men 28.70 years. The total age at marriage of the entire number of 8,795 married people is 250,882 years, and the average age 28.53.

The favorite age of marriage, both for men and women, appears to be 25. The youngest marriages are at 16, in both sexes, and the oldest are the two men who married at 78. Only two women married (first time) above 48, one at 53 and one at 57.

Of the married men 121, or 1.45 per cent, were married during their minority; 2,624, or 31.38 per cent, were married at 25 or under; 5,855, or 70 per cent, at 30 or under; 7,934, or 94.87 per cent, at 40 or under; and only 329, or 5.13 per cent, at over 40. The most important decade, matrimonially, with these men, were the years from 22 to 31, inclusive, when 71.50 per cent of the entire number were married.

Of the 432 married women 80, or 18.52 per cent, were married at or before the age of 20; 266, or 66.11 per cent, were married at 25 or under; 355, or 82.17 per cent, at 30 or under, and 397, or 91.90 per cent, at 35 or under; and only 35, or 8.10 per cent, were married after 35.

The limitations of the present article do not permit of comparative elaboration of these statistics, but a few suggestions may be ventured. The proportion of unmarried to married women is above the general normal of women of similar age. This is true, however, of any group of self-supporting women. In the old days, when anything like an independent life was almost unattainable by a woman, it used to be said that marriage, to women, was a career, while to a man it was a mere incident. But that has been largely changed. There are many women to whom marriage and the home life are the career, but numerous avenues are open in literature, the arts, education, research and other directions, which women may take. In following them many become so engrossed that they prefer to remain unmarried. Others, however, find a husband and domestic life no hindrance to their professional or artistic success, and while the proportion of unmarried (37.10 per cent) is a large one, the married women (62.90 per cent) have a substantial majority over their spinster sisters.

With the men, the fact that 91.81 per cent are married discloses the truth that the successful man (using the term "success" in its higher and better sense) is usually a married man. The proportion of married to unmarried is not startlingly variant from the normal of men of similar age, but is somewhat above.

As to the age of marriage disclosed in the last table, it will scarcely bear out the contention that there is any serious tendency toward undue postponement of marriage above the usual American standard, when only one in twenty of the men, and one in thirty of the women, waited until after they were 40 before being married.

KEY TO PUBLISHERS

A feature of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, which was introduced in the 1901-2 edition and has been continued and elaborated in the present volume, is the Key Symbol appended to the title of each book of all authors who have furnished the required information. This key symbol is intended to indicate the name of the publisher. Thus under the name of "Churchill, Winston," will be found in the list of his books: "The Crisis, 1901 M1." This indicates that the book was published in 1901 by The Macmillan Co., of New York. The Key is the list which follows, the name of The Macmillan Co. being found under the letter "M" and No. 1 under that letter.

NECROLOGY

The following is a list of prominent men and women who have died since January 1, 1895. It will in many cases explain the absence of names which may be looked for in the biographical section of this book.

The names marked with a † are those of persons whose deaths became known to the editor after their biographies appearing in this volume were in type and too late for their elimination. The names of persons who were included in the first edition (1899-1900) of WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA, *but who have since died, are marked with one *; those in the second edition (1901-2) who have since died are marked thus **.*

The figures following each name indicate the year of birth and death. Thus, 10-96 following the first name in this list indicates that Antoine Thomson d'Abbadie was born in 1810 and died in 1896, the figures representing 1800 being omitted in both cases.

Where the — (dash) appears, the year of birth or death, as the case may be, is not known.
